In Animal Adventures in North Carolina, Jennifer Bower writes about the different places you can go to visit animals and see them in zoos, and things like that. There are a lot of zoos that Bower talks about, and tips about visiting the zoos and seeing the animals. She includes eye-catching photos of different animals, and great detail and some history about them as well. I would definitely recommend this book to animals lovers, whether you are going to North Carolina or not! I would like to thank John F. Blair Publishers for graciously supplying this book in exchange for a review. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. So many adventures!! By Bug7777I had no idea there were so many things to do in NC that were fun, inexpensive and in every corner of the state no matter where you live. I have already used the book several times to do some things that are practically in my back yard..... I have been writing notes in the book to myself, when I went, who I took and how much fun we had. It is truly a treasure. Highly recommend to everyone who loves animals, learning and near to home adventures/. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Excellent animal resource book... By Good KarmaIf you're looking for information about animal habitats in NC, then "Animal Adventures in North Carolina" is the book to buy. I'm planning educational field trips using this book as a guide. The "Tips" section given for each facility is especially helpful. Now, on to my next animal adventure...

Weekend and day trips are always fun. Combine them with attractions that allow the viewing, touching, and feeding of animals and such excursions suddenly become adventures. If you have ever dreamed of listening to the howls of a New Guinea singing dog, inhaling the distinct smell of a binturong, trekking through the mountains beside a llama, or touching the furry leg of a tarantula, then Animal Adventures in North Carolina is the travel guide for you - and you won't even need a passport. Animal attractions draw over 200 million visitors in the United States each year. These attractions provide many Americans with their only connection to nature. Throughout North Carolina, facilities dedicated to the rescue, rehabilitation, and conservation of various animal species abound. Through a variety of exhibits, programs, and personal encounters, these facilities heighten appreciation for animal conservation while offering exciting educational experiences for everyone in the family. In Animal Adventures in North Carolina, Jennifer Bean Bower shares 70 animal attractions that she has personally discovered throughout her travels of the entire state. Each entry provides contact information, driving directions, possible fees, hours of operation, and useful travel tips, accompanied by photographs and detailed descriptions of the attraction's offerings. An extensive appendix lists additional opportunities for viewing and interacting with animals in North Carolina, including wildlife refuges, farm tours, nature preserves, and working farm vacations.

Animal Adventures in North Carolina is a very detailed and inspiring wildlife/nature guide. Included are numerous places...where one can find beautiful and amazing wildlife, opportunities to volunteer and tons of fun places to visit with children...this book has it all! ed by Rita V for Readers' FavoriteThis guide goes beyond...generic information... you will find several pages telling...what you will find there, the best times to come, the age groups that are best... and tips to make your trip better. With this book, you will be well-educated about where you are going...before you get there... ed by Joy H for Readers' FavoriteFrom the Back Cover Animal Adventures in North Carolina directs readers to 70 opportunities-aviaries, aquariums, farms, sanctuaries, rehabilitation centers, zoos, and seasonal events-to meet new species, observe how injured and orphaned animals are cared for, discover where food products come from, and learn how to champion the cause of animals. At the Cape Fear Serpentarium, they'll see bushmasters, mambas, cobras, and numerous other snakes, lizards, and crocodiles collected by legendary herpetologist Dean Ripa. At the Horse Protection Society of North Carolina, they'll make the acquaintance of rescued horses and have the opportunity to volunteer in their care. At Conservators' Center, they'll meet servals, binturongs, jungle cats, New Guinea signing dogs, and the largest collection of lions in the state. At Sylvan Heights Waterfowl Park, they'll hear birds that honk, whistle, chirp, and coo-and even some that sound like pigs grunting and people laughing. Families will find in these pages enough adventures to last them for years. Even lifelong animal lovers will be amazed at the variety of attractions North Carolina has to offer.
