Robert F. Edwards : Antarctica: My Journey North From Antarctica before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Antarctica: My Journey North From Antarctica:

Come, one and all to experience what few people will ever experience in any of our life-times. The Antarctic, its mystical wonders and luring inhabitants. Next, visit the Patagonians of Argentina with the true gaucho's life that has made them famous throughout the world. The Galapagos Islands, known for its contribution of rare species, and ecological remoteness protecting the planets ecosystem. Continue on to enjoy some of the mysteries and excitement of Central America through the Panama right up to Honduras. Learn about the civilization of the Copan. This Canadian back-packer, over the years, has had many remarkable experiences, but this one is a testimonial that... "Dreams do come true."

About the Author Robert F. Edwards is presently living in Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada with his wife of thirty-four years. He maintains a close connection with his daughter and grandson, also living in the Lower Mainland. After a successful career in the business arena, he now has the time to pursue his driving ambition of world travel and has been on every continent. He enjoys sailing, trekking, and mountain climbing. In later years, he took on the challenging sport of fencing, and is proficient with all three weapons. He also writes poems, and fictional stories. He partakes in the arts in the various forms; painting in acrylic and water-color, and clay sculpturing, along with photography. He is an active volunteer with the World Vision charitable organization and has recently visited many of the sponsored children in Mongolia.
