Brazil is in high spirits. The host of the 2014 FIFA World Cup and the 2016 Summer Olympics currently lives up to its golden 1950s when it strengthened its industry and its democratic base, won two football world championships, and gave Bossa Nova to the world. The current upswing involving booming economic growth and cultural development is accompanied by good architecture: a great number of outstanding buildings have emerged, reviving international interest in Brazilian architecture. This publication provides an exciting selection of 220 modern buildings. Considering the vastness of the country and the enormous number of projects, the selection presented here is far from exhaustive but presents a panoramic overview that helps the traveller to see good architecture.

About the Author
Laurence Kimmel (1971) is a French architect and holds a PhD in aesthetics from the University Paris X Nanterre. She published the book "Architecture as landscape - Alvaro Siza" in 2010 (ed. Petra). She is now a teacher and researcher at the Ecole Nationale Supérieure d'Architecture de Paris la Villette.
Anke Tiggemann (1975) studied Interior Design in Detmold, Germany. After her degree in 2004, she worked as Research and Teaching Assistant at Hochschule Ostwestfalen-Lippe for CAD / Computer-Aided Design. Currently she lives in Berlin and works as an interior designer and author.
Bruno Santa Cecilia (1977) is a Brazilian architect with degrees from the Federal University of Minas Gerais. He is professor in the undergraduate programme of UFMG and FUMEC schools of architecture, and published the book "Eolo Maia: complexidade e contradicao na arquitetura brasileira" in 2006 (ed. UFMG). Bruno is also a founding partner of the architecture practice Arquitetos Associados and a founding editor of MDC - Architecture Magazine.
