Excerpt from Chow-Chow, Vol. 2 of 2: Being Selections From a Journal Kept in India, Egypt, and Syria, 1867
During the monsoon, and particularly near Guneskondy, we often see an encampment of wild-looking men, women, and still wilder, untameable, little children. They are called Weyds, and are aboriginal, with a language distinct from all other Hindoo dialects. They carry about medicines for sale to the neighbouring villages. I have frequently met them on the plains, when they used to show me their medicines, principally powdered herbs - some in gourds, others in cocoa-nut shells.
