Max Leonard, Andrew Edwards : City Cycling: Europe before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised City Cycling: Europe:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Delightful By Erich Awesome guides to European cities and experiencing them on the bike. The coffee shop and restaurant destinations in particular are good advice to experience each city a little more intimately. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. This series of pocket guides is the perfect companion for cycling in key European cities By J. Chan This series of pocket guides is the perfect companion for cycling in key European cities. They contain just the right amount of detail to get you around town, with helpful call outs for places of interest, bike shops and cafes. Superb value for the velo-minded traveler. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Very pretty to look at By Einar Acuna Very pretty to look at. Got it as a gift for my mother in law as a Christmas gift. She loves cycling and was planning a trip to Europe.

Published in association with Rapha Racing: practical guides for cycling enthusiasts traveling in Europe From country lanes to city centers, everyone is getting on a bike: it offers a cheap, independent, green, and healthy way to explore. While cycle touring has been around for decades, biking in cities abroad is a newer phenomenon, coinciding with the rise of cycle chic, new urban bike routes, and city-sponsored rental services. Thames Hudson has joined with the sophisticated cycling brand, Rapha Racing, to produce a series of city-cycling guides geared to seeing Europe on two wheels. Each of the eight compact volumes in the boxed set features cycle-friendly neighborhoods in London, Paris, Copenhagen, Barcelona, and more, complete with itineraries, cycle maps, and cyclist-friendly places to visit. The guides are aimed at people interested in casual exploration, but there is also information for hardcore racing enthusiasts. Designed with the cyclist in mind, the slim paperbacks will fit easily into a backpack or back pocket. 400 color illustrations

A box set of illustrated guides to biking through eight European cities. - Design Sponge With understated style and superb quality that matches their apparel, the style vanguards at Rapha have created a set of cycling guidebooks for eight European cities that are almost too pretty to cram in a pannier. . . . Feature[s] page after page of beautiful illustrations by artists from each city. - Adventure Cyclist The pages brim with in-depth neighborhood info, invaluable tips on getting around by bike, and gorgeous illustration. . . . Small but mighty. - Fathom About the Author Max Leonard is a writer and cyclist. He is a co-author of Fixed: Global Fixed-Gear Bike Culture. He lives in England.
