This book is less theoretical than others and more practical.5 of 5 people found the following review helpful. Help for families on the moveBy Quality reviewThis is fantastic for families that move! It makes sense, and could possibly replace a counselor in regards to emotional problems due to relocation. The book helps me understand my confusion growing up and moving, as well as help my kids understand themselves better while we are a Foreign Service family, uprooting ourselves frequently.Thank you to the author! I had ordered two by mistake but chose to keep the extra copy as a gift to a friend. HIGHLY RECOMMENDED!10 of 16 people found the following review helpful. Very disappointed with this bookBy Willys WrencherI was disappointed with this book and stopped reading it early on when the author advocates a form of lying to your children in order to help them with culture shock. After reading that I immediately returned this book to and started searching for other books on re-entry and culture shock.

A lot has changed since well-known Canadian author Robin Pascoe wrote Culture Shock! A Parent's Guide. The world has become globalized, digitalized, and sadly, terrorized. That's the big picture that Pascoe examines in Raising Global Nomads. In her own life, the author's day job raising her two children has ended as her daughter begins a career as an environmental activist and her son heads to university. In her fifth book for expatriate families, the author recounts with honesty and trademark humour what worked for her family and shares the hard lessons learned. Parenting styles in general, and of third culture kids in particular, have changed dramatically, prompting this timely and comprehensive reexamination of the challenges of parenting abroad.

Finally, a book for parents who ask 'is there any book that tells me what to do about it all?' -- Ruth E. Van Reken, co-author Third Culture Kids: The Experience of Growing Up Among Worlds. It's like spending the weekend with people who will guide you through life as an expatriate family. -- Dr. Anne Copeland, Director, Interchange Institute, Boston. About the AuthorPascoe is well known to travelling spouses around the world for her inspirational and humorous culture shock books about being a wife and parent. She also speaks to expatriate communities and human resources groups about the challenges of expatriate and repatriate life facing the spouse and family.
