Charles Daniel Dance : Recollections of Four Years in Venezuela (Classic Reprint) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Recollections of Four Years in Venezuela (Classic Reprint):

Excerpt from Recollections of Four Years in VenezuelaI have often wondered why so many books are written - some of them of scarcely any interest. I being the judge. And yet month after month new publications are advertised, and I suppose the books are sold, as according to a mercantile phrase "the supply is commensurate with the demand." If I be asked why I have written, the following must be the answer: - I was ill. It seemed to me that my family would soon be left unprovided for, and I Infidel, that would not realise the fact that "God Provides" was despondent. But a friend who had better sense than I, advised me to write. His advice was good; for the recollections of days gone by, and the increasing interest I took in the work I had begun - so absorbed my attention that I soon left thinking of my Illness - and I recovered.
